The National Strategy Information Center is a nonpartisan, tax-exempt institution organized in 1962 to conduct educational programs in national defense.

The Center is privately supported and espouses no political causes. Its funds derive from foundations, corporations and individuals. It has no government contracts, nor does it operate with government funds. It is not associated with the defense industry.

NSIC's Directors and Officers represent a wide spectrum of responsible political opinion from liberal to conservative. What unites them, however, is the conviction that neither isolationism nor pacifism provides realistic solutions to the challenge of 20th century totalitarianism.

NSIC exists to encourage civil-military partnership on the grounds that, in a democracy, informed public opinion is necessary to a viable U.S. defense system capable of protecting the nation's vital interests and assisting other free nations which aspire to independence and self-fulfillment.
